Mission: Black List #1

B

By Eric Maddox with Davin Seay
HarperCollins | $25.99

Basic Story

Army Staff Sgt. Eric Maddox, the brains behind Saddam Hussein's capture on Dec. 13, 2003, reveals the full story behind the former Iraqi president's final days on the run and the five-month pursuit to track him down.

Sample Grab

"I have a job to do, Rafi. It's very simple. I need to catch the bad guys. If I do my job, my boss will like me. If you help me do my job, I will like you. Then I will help you. Do you want me to help you, Rafi?"

Our Take

Maddox delivers an overly detailed play-by-play of the steps he took to find Hussein -- so meticulous that readers may wish for more action, less note taking. His "gosh, oh gee" tone verges on the hokey at times, and some of the prisoner interrogations read like Hollywood scripts. Still, this is an informative addition to the Iraq war annals.
